Who am I?

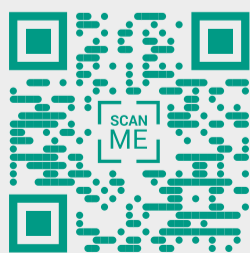

I would describe myself as being outgoing, enthusiastic and passionate about the things I'm interested in. I'm a focused and organised individual who has always been highly regarded as a professional team player. I try to look at situations as chances to grow rather than something to be afraid of.

Fun fact

I've recently completed a City & Guilds in Electrical Installation. Unfortunately, I'm not as good with a drill as I am with a keyboard so I decided to challenge myself outside of work and do something out of my comfort zone. I now have an extra life skill that I feel is invaluable and a pro at changing light bulbs.

On the Spot

What are my strengths

If you need someone who digs in at those crucial work times...
I'm your man.

If you need someone who works great individually and thrives in a team...
I'm your man.

If you need someone to do that out of hours charity run, bike ride, or any sporting event for the good of the business...
I'm your man.

I've been in the industry for over 20 years. I have good knowledge of all day-to-day software and confident in my artworking ability when it comes to pre and post production processes. I'm a solid worker and would bring good experience and knowledge to any team.

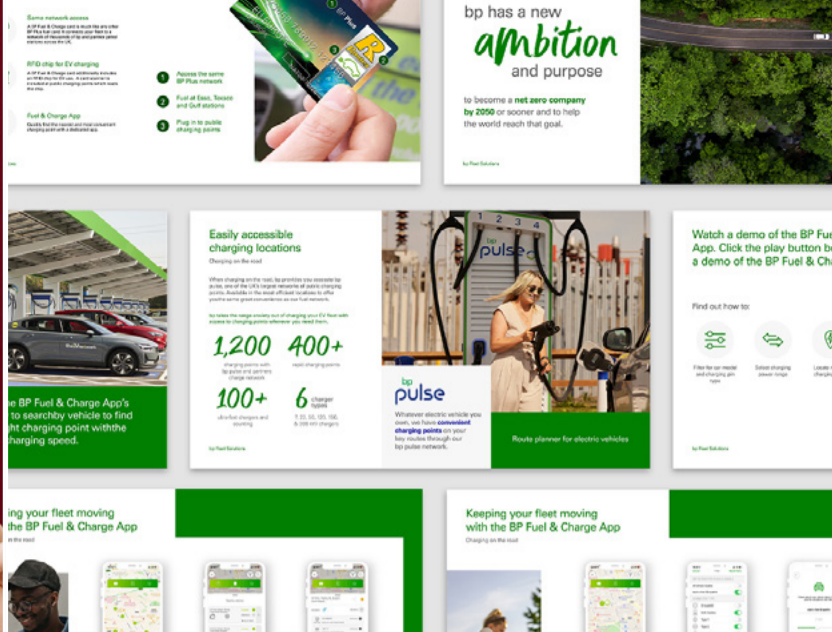

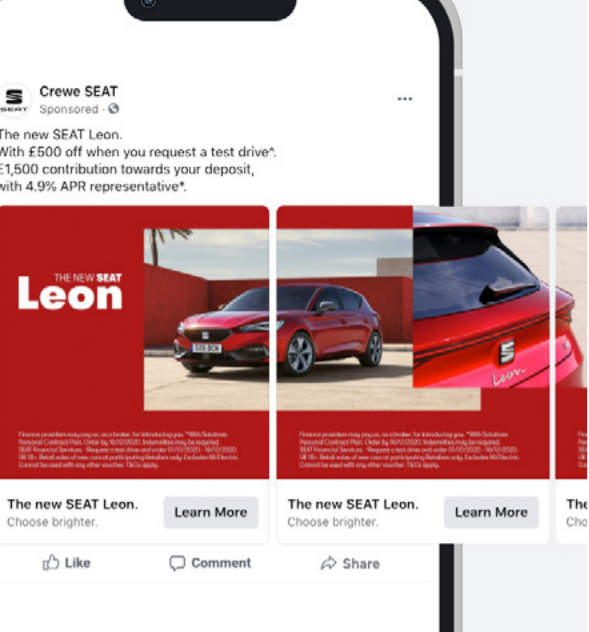

There must be weaknesses

No-ones perfect, so here are some areas I would like to improve on...

I have trouble saying 'no' and taking too much on - Not sure if that is a weakness but I'm always the one to reach out first when people need help even though I might be busy myself.

I should be more vocal - I think I can offer a lot more than I let on. Because I class myself as a worker and keep my head down, I'm probably not utilised enough in situations.

I don't know it all - I'm not afraid to hold my hand up when I'm unsure of something. Learning off other team members is how I've grown my own knowledge through the years.

interests

Big football lover (watching West Ham win, but mostly lose), like going to the gym most days, walking and exploring new places (mostly in tow with the dog), big foody and like visiting new restaurants just as much as my local pub around the corner, However I most like spending a lot of free time with family and close friends.
